With the largest number of attorneys focused on healthcare in any New Jersey law firm, Brach Eichler represents physicians, hospitals, nursing homes, ambulatory surgery centers, and home healthcare agencies statewide and regionally. Brach Eichler also has clients from statewide specialty organizations, including the Radiological Society of New Jersey, New Jersey Association of Ambulatory Surgery Centers, and New Jersey Academy of Ophthalmology.

“We have earned a reputation for our commitment to understanding the healthcare industry and the business of practicing medicine in New Jersey,” says John Fanburg, managing member and chair of the firm’s healthcare practice. “It’s a nuanced business. Because we have actively served providers within the healthcare arena for several decades, we have acted as strategic partners with our clients through business cycles characterized by tremendous business and regulatory changes.”

Brach Eichler’s real estate practice represents New Jersey’s industry leaders, including many of the largest developers, apartment owners, and investors. The firm boasts an active real estate tax appeal practice, which has experienced tremendous growth as owners and investors seek to reduce their exposure.

The firm’s wills, trusts, and estates practice provides state-of-the-art planning for individuals and their families, as well as estate/trust administration.

“We’re proud of our work in healthcare, real estate, and trusts and estates, and our supporting practices,” says Fanburg. “We are in a growth mode, having experienced a very successful 2010, and we are committed to continue to move Brach Eichler forward by adding partners, taking on more space, adding complementary practice areas to our base of legal services, and continuing to raise the bar in client service.”
