As of June 1, 2025, New Jersey employers are required to disclose compensation details when advertising new job openings and notifying employees of internal promotional opportunities. The New Jersey Pay Transparency Act aims to promote pay equity. The law applies to employers (defined broadly to include any persons, companies, corporations, firms, labor organizations, associations, government entities, and municipalities) that have ten or more employees working over 20 calendar weeks and conduct business, employ workers, or accept job applications in New Jersey. Under the law, employers must include information on hourly wages, salaries, or pay ranges, along with a general description of benefits, in all job postings. This applies to both external job openings and internal transfers or promotions. Employers retain flexibility to make upward adjustments to compensation during final salary negotiations when making an official offer. Additionally, employers must maintain records of all job postings, including details about pay ranges and benefits.
