There are dozens of federal labor and employment laws and each state has its own labor and employment laws as well.

All in, there are hundreds of labor and employment regulations that exist and no company and no employee can be expected to know the ins-and-outs of each of them. The Labor and Employment Practice at Brach Eichler knows these laws and regulations and can guide you – whether an employer or employee – through the maze of rules that apply to the workplace, and that guidance is provided to you accurately and clearly, without being mired in legalese.

Statutory Knowledge and Experience

Our Labor and Employment Practice has experience with and knowledge of the majority of labor and employment laws including, but not limited to:

Employers

Our Labor and Employment attorneys know what companies need in their labor and employment counsel: timely, reliable, and practical advice dealing with every aspect from workplace policies in general, to specific employee disputes and issues, internal investigations, government investigations, administrative proceedings, and litigation. Given the number of statutes and regulations that apply to the employer-employee relationship, no company can operate without competent labor and employment counsel. There is virtually no situation outside of this group's experience and capabilities. Our attorneys provide employers with answers and solutions – instead of never-ending questions and “what ifs.”

Our attorneys provide counsel in the areas of:

- Counseling and compliance services
- Employee benefits and qualified plans
- Administration and management of qualified retirement plans
- Regulatory investigations and hearings
- Litigation and alternative dispute resolution
