Matthew Di Chiara is an associate attorney at Brach Eichler, handling a variety of personal injury matters.

Matt graduated from Pennsylvania State University with a Bachelor of Science in Legal Studies. After college, Matt attended law school at Nova Southeastern University, where he graduated with high honors as Magna Cum Laude.

Matt is the third generation of his family to practice personal injury in New Jersey. This exposure to the practice throughout his life has allowed Matt to harness the integrity and dedication necessary to excel in the profession. Before joining the ranks of Brach Eichler, Matt worked at personal injury firms across both New Jersey and Florida giving him a diverse outlook on the personal injury practice.

Matt's goal is to achieve the best possible outcome for all of his clients and get them the compensation they deserve. He handles all personal injury matters at the firm from inception through settlement or trial.
