Privacy Policy

Brach Eichler receives and stores information users enter on our Website or provide us in any other way. We do not distribute or otherwise disclose any personally identifiable information about users of the Website to any person outside of Brach Eichler, unless you request us to do so, or if we reasonably believe that we are required to do so by law. If in the future Brach Eichler undergoes a corporate reorganization, we may transfer your personally identifiable information to the surviving entity.

This website uses “cookies” to identify registered users for this website. Although we do not collect any personally identifiable information from a visitor accessing our website, unless a visitor provides us with such information, we do use “cookies” to identify website administrators and editors (users) for the purposes of logging in and utilizing the site’s content management system. Additionally, we automatically collect non-personally identifiable information such as the domain name from which visitors access the Internet while viewing our website. This information enables us to determine the number of visitors to specific pages, to gauge interest in pages or posts browsed, and to improve visitors’ browsing experience.

Brach Eichler uses the résumés and information submitted to us to determine whether or not a user’s employment inquiry will be given consideration for employment openings. Such information and résumés are not distributed outside of our firm.

We cannot guarantee the privacy of personal information you transmit over the Internet or that may be collected by others in transit, or any security measures that we may use in protecting such information that we receive, nor can we guarantee the privacy of your personal information if you visit any third-party websites, including those which may be hyperlinked from this website.
