Brach Eichler has launched an Alternative Dispute Resolution (“ADR”) Practice. The firm now assists parties with timely resolution of complex disputes, thereby avoiding the uncertainty and costs associated with protracted litigation. Brach Eichler now has the ability to resolve disputes by mediation and participate in major arbitration forums including the American Arbitration Association and the International Institute for Conflict Prevention and Resolution. When representing clients in ADR, our approach involves working with our clients to determine the best dispute resolution process to meet their needs with the goal of achieving efficient and expeditious solutions in the most cost effective manner.

At the forefront of our ADR Practice is The Honorable Lisa F. Chrystal (Ret.), who served on the New Jersey Superior Court for 22 years, and as the Presiding Judge of the Family Division in Union County since 2014. Additionally, she served 8 years in the Civil Division. Whether serving as mediator or consultant to legal teams, the depth and breadth of her experience as a distinguished judge and before that as a seasoned attorney allow her to provide deep, impartial and meaningful solutions. Judge Chrystal's unique qualifications enable the ADR Practice to offer mini-trials, private judging, and neutral evaluations of disputes and appellate arguments.
